The Story of Mr Frank Davis

When I was a little boy I had so many hobbies. First, I think, I was a great collector of different things. I collected stamps, coins, badges, small books, pictures, pencils and what not. I did try to have thematic collections. I had large collections and was always proud of them.

When I was older, at the age of twelve, I think, I became fond of sports. I spent a lot of time outdoors. I was playing different sports games in the yard. In summer I swam a lot and became a school champion. In the 5th form I became a theatre-goer and spent all my free time in the theatre and sometimes I also went to the cinema.

When I was finishing school my parents bought me a computer. So I forgot about going to the theatre, to the cinema or visiting museums. Working with computers became my hobby. However soon I became tired of this hobby too, and decided to change it. I tried to paint pictures in my free time but I wasn't very good. I tried dancing and acting but soon I realized I could never be a success on the stage.

Then one day I had an idea to write a story about my dog. The story was rather short. It was not very clever or very interesting but it was my story and I liked it very much. This is how I began to write stories about birds and animals. My little daughter liked to listen to them before she went to bed. She said that she was fond of my new hobby.

Now it's difficult to say if it is my hobby or not as it is my work now. I like this work and I have already written five books for children.

The First Mobile

On April 3, 1972, a man came out of the Hilton hotel in Manhattan and started walking down the street. He stopped, raised his hand with a strange object in it, put it to his ear and started to talk into it. This was the beginning of mobile phone history, more than 30 years ago. That man was Motorola's project manager, Martin Cooper, who was celebrating his 34th birthday that day. The strange object was the first mobile phone, which was nicknamed "the shoe" because of its unusual shape.

Mr. Cooper had gone to New York to introduce the new phone. The first call he made was to his rival, Joe Engel at AT&T's research centre. Engel was responsible for the development of the radiophones for cars. "I called him and said that I was talking on a real mobile phone that I was holding in my hand," said Cooper. "I don't remember what he said in reply, but I'm sure he wasn't happy."

The quality of the call was very good, because although New York had only one base station at that time, it was being used by only one user – Martin Cooper.

Answer the questions.

2. What did he have in his hand?
3. How old was the man?

Stamp Collecting

Stamp collecting, or philately, has been a hobby of millions of people all over the world for about 100 years. Stamp collecting can be a very educational hobby. Every picture on a stamp was selected for some particular reason. Each can give you some information about the country from which it came.

The most valuable stamps, of course, are the rare ones. Usually they are connected with some events. For example, in certain United States post offices in 1847 there was a shortage of five-cent stamps. The postmasters just cut ten-cent stamps in half, each part paying five cents postage. Today these halves cost several hundred dollars each.

Mistakes occur in printing stamps, and such mistakes make the stamp even more valuable. In 1918, the first United States airmail stamps went on sale. Each of them cost 24 cents. In a certain post office the clerk sold them at the regular price. What he did not notice was that on some of them the airplane was printed upside down. Later, each of those stamps cost 2,000 dollars!

Answer the questions.

1. What is another name for stamp collecting?
2. For how long has stamp collecting been a hobby of millions of people?
3. What information can a stamp give you?
4. What stamps are the most valuable now?
5. Why did the postmasters cut ten-cent stamps in half in 1847?
6. What makes stamps more valuable?
7. Why do some of the first US airmail stamps cost 2,000 dollars?
